On Tuesday morning a rhinoceros was shot on Mr. Lachen's coffee plantation at Castwood, near Johore Bahru. It was killed at one shot with a bullet from an ordinary 12-bore central fire fowling piece, fired at a distance of about 50 feet. The bullet entered behind the shoulder, pierced the heart, and lodged in the outer skin of the further shoulder, having gone right through the animal's body from one side to the other. On receiving the shot the rhinoceros, which turned out to be a nearly full grown female, turned sharp round and fell dead on the spot where she was standing.
