

THE DUKE OF YORK'S HUNTING ADVENTURE IN KENYA.

CHARGED BY HUGE RHINOCEROS.

The Duke and Duchess of York reached Isiolo, their camping destination, on Boxing Day, after a hundred miles' journey. Stalking the same evening, the Duke made his first kill in Kenya Colony with a couple of shots.

Starting off again at sunrise the next morning, through difficult country and tracts of the most dense forest land, the Royal party sighted its destination towards evening, but encountered a tropical cloudburst. The camp was several inches under water, and the party settled down drenched; but all accepted the situation with philosophic good humour, laughing at their plight.

On Sunday, December 23, the party set out before breakfast, dividing into two sections. Using a .22 rifle, the Duchess brought off a good shot, bagging a guineafowl on the wing, while the Duke added specimens of buck to his bag.

Stalking a huge rhinoceros towards evening, the Duke had an exciting adventure. He fired at the animal, which thereupon charged furiously at him. Standing his ground pluckily, the Duke fired from a distance of thirty yards simultaneously with Mr. Anderson, the wild-game hunter, and the beast rolled over dead. The Duke was highly delighted with his adventure.

to the new nursery from Warton, which was inaugurated on July 1. A Ministry of Health inquiry with reference to a slight clearance scheme was held in February, the proposal including the erection of houses for displaced persons on another site. The Ministry sanctioned the scheme, but little progress has been made. Housing questions have been considered, but a suggestion to reduce rents of residences erected by the Council in the Deolwsorth district was not entertained. Numerous plans for the building of dwellings for private individuals have been passed. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wainwright terminated a long and honorable period of service as Master and Matron of the Poor Law Institution, and received tangible appreciation of their work from the Board of Guardians. They were succeeded by Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Till. Atherton Parish Council has dealt with important matters. A decision on the proposed market rights was reached, and the question of obtaining a loan remains unsettled on technical points. The public library was fully opened, and certain proposals made. In the end it was decided to drop the building of a Carnegie library and all other schemes, and to continue the library in the Town Hall. There has been much controversy regarding a site chosen for a new Central School, and the Education Committee to the Sites and Buildings Committee.
