ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—A fine female rhinoceros and a large male tiger, were on Tuesday morning taken to the Zoological Gardens, in the Regent's-park, from a vessel in the London Dock, which has also brought two lions for the same gardens.

THE JOHN BARRY.—The "John Barry," which sailed

"progressing" most auspiciously. We trust we have satisfied our readers that no possible risk can happen to Captain ASHAGER from the division of their votes between that gentleman and Mr. KEMBLE. The Conservative who splits his vote between a candidate of his own principles and a destructive, is a mean, miserable temporiser, who, whilst he does violence to his own conscience, will please neither party, and earn the contempt of both.

ANECDOTE OF THE QUEEN.—We have been nauseated lately with many mock-heraldic anecdotes of the Queen, such as her giving sovereigns to poor women for flowers and strawberries, which they happened to be in the condition, in which "ladies are who love their lords;" her shedding a flood of tears when informed by Lord Melbourne, that the imprisonment for Debt Bill could not possibly pass into a law until next session; and the agitation developed on the occasion of her prorogation of parliament, by the "heaving of her bosom and the brilliancy of her diamond stomacher." There is one anecdote of her Majesty, however, which the penny-a-line gentry do not appear to have got hold of, and which has been related to us on authority which we see no reason to question. On her last visit to Windsor, her Majesty was asked at what pace she would be pleased to proceed. "As fast as you can go" was her reply. Of course her Majesty's dutiful servants took her entirely a pied de la lettre. Her escort, however, not being so well mounted, had some difficulty in keeping up with the royal carriage, and in endeavouring so to do, the horse of one of them dropped dead in the road. On being informed of the circumstance, her Majesty is said to have exclaimed, "both horses and men have been asleep for some time past," but (assuming a look of determination worthy of Queen Elizabeth herself) "I'll keep them awake!"

FRANCE.—The French papers contain nothing of interest, except their singular disposition upon the conduct of the King of Hanover, the motives or ultimate result of which they are fully as ignorant as their brother journalists in England.

SPAIN.—Every week brings a repetition of the same scenes over again. Don Carlos has entered Valencia, and it would appear from recent accounts from that country, that the termination of the war is as remote as it had been three years ago. There is one fact certain, and that is, that the Carlists are daily gaining ground. The capital is still tranquil.

HANOVER.—The King of Hanover has revoked the Hanoverian Constitution, which had been established by George the Third. At yet all is mere surmise as to the nature of the Constitution which he intends substituting for it; but one thing appears certain on the face of it, that his Majesty has taken such a step by the advice of his Ministers, and with a view of making the Constitution more in accordance with the feelings of his Hanoverian subjects. The reason of his revoking it upon his accession to the throne seems to be, that otherwise he would be obliged to swear fidelity to it; of course the oath would ever afterwards preclude him from altering or modifying it. His Majesty has also put himself at the head of the army.

AMERICA.—The American packets of the 1st inst., arrived at Liverpool on Wednesday last. They bring large consignments of specie; the amount is variously stated. One of them, the Garrick, is said to have 20,000, on board. They bring papers up to the 1st of July. They represent trade to be on the improvement. At New York a great meeting was held on the 23rd of June, at Mosome Hall, of the citizens favourable to putting Mr. Daniel Webster forward as a candidate to succeed the present President, Van Buren, at the termination of his period of office.

Money Market and Latest Intelligence

CITY, FRIDAY, HALF-PAST TWELVE.

The following notice was exhibited this morning at the North and South American Coffee-house:—
"Falmouth, July 19.
"The Briers has just arrived from Mexico; 26 days from Havana. Freight 300,000 dollars on merchants' account. Six passengers, all well."
This packet has on board letters from Vera Cruz, and there are ship letters from Pernambuco, Demerara, St. Thomas, and Trinidad.

From Naples we have advice to the 1st inst., which state the Dowager Queen of the Two Sicilies had set off in great haste for Manfredonia, after having lost her two principal ladies in alarming degree, and from 100 to 500 persons were dying daily in the city. Its ravages had also extended to the coast of Castellamare and Sorrento, and Capua, and the neighbourhood had been frightfully depopulated. Naples was completely deserted by all foreigners, but the King continued to reside himself with his royal consort in the public promenade, and had taken up his residence at the Villa di Monte. All the royal family had visited in state the patron Saint of the city, to pray for a cessation of the cholera.

TWO O'CLOCK.
Speculations have been going on this week in Spanish and Portuguese Stocks for a fall in price. Holders entertain great fears that Don Carlos will get into Madrid at the head of his army, and act prudently contracting their stock of Spanish and Portuguese Bonds. The former has fallen in consequence about 3 per cent., and the latter 2 per cent. Very unsatisfactory accounts of the state of the treasuries, both at Lisbon and Madrid, continue to be received, and it is not thought unlikely there will be no dividends forthcoming on Portuguese Securities. The Coupons of the Active Spanish Bonds, as they are styled, will most likely become a portion of the deferred debt of Spain. Spanish Active Bonds have fallen from 20½ to 19½ this week, the No. 2000 Coupons from 43 to 41. Portuguese 5 per Cents, from 43 to 40½, and the 3 per Cents, from 27 to 25. Dutch, Belgian, and Russian Stocks have not fluctuated materially, but South American Bonds have been a shade higher. Columbian is now at 24½, and Peruvian only fetches 19.

But little business has been done in the Funds for some time past. The fluctuation in the price of Consols for Money and Account has not been more than ¼ per cent. There is a good deal of difficulty experienced by capitalists in the profitable employment of their money. No failures have been caused by the settlement of the account in Consols. There has been a rise of about 1/8 to 2 per cent. in the value of stock since the account began. The highest quotation of Consols for Account this week has been 92½, which price they fetched yesterday and to-day; for Money they are worth 91, and for the Account 91½. Until there is a greater degree of activity than exists at present among the mercantile interests, it is likely stocks will continue to rise.

Exchequer Bills have risen to 46 prem., and India Bonds have fetched the same quotation. There have been some pretty considerable investments in these securities since last Wednesday. Bank Stock has fallen from 200 to 205½. India Stock has been also rather heavy, at 256½, which is much less than the price was a few weeks since.

The Queen held her first levee since her accession to the throne on Monday. Her Majesty and suite left Buckingham Palace at twenty-five minutes past one o'clock for St. James's, in the three royal carriages, and escorted by a detachment of the first regiment of foot. The levee was most numerous attended by the nobility, gentry, naval, military, and civil officers. The Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London, accompanied by a numerous deputation were introduced to her Majesty and presented an address of congratulation from the City of London on her accession to the throne. The Queen's Drawing-room at St. James's Palace shortly after one o'clock. Her Majesty came in a carriage drawn by two horses. The coachman and footmen were in deep mourning. After the levee her Majesty held a Privy Council, at which several members of his late Majesty's Privy Council were re-elected, and took their places at the board. Several of the Queen's Majesty, appointing polling places in different counties, were also signed by her Majesty.

Cavendish. Caradoc, came in state to the Palace, from Buckingham Palace, accompanied by a party of Life Guards. His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex also entered the Palace by the Colour Court. The Duke of Saxo Meiningen came, accompanied by Baron Gersdorf, the Saxon Minister, and attended by Barons Munchausen and de Gemmingen. Prince Ernest of Hesse (Lippisthal) also came to attend the Drawing-room. The doors of the Drawing-room opened at ten o'clock, and the guests were introduced. Her Majesty was attended by the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Lady Portman, Lady in Waiting, Miss Dillon, Miss Lister, Miss Cavendish, Miss Cooks, Miss Matilda Paget, and Miss Murray, Major-General Lord Robert Ovey, and Colonel Cavendish, the Lord Groom, and Equerry in Waiting; Masters Ellice and Cavendish, Pages of Honour. The great Officers of State were also in attendance on her Majesty. Her Majesty wore a black crape dress, richly embroidered in jet, over black silk; train of black crape over black silk, tastefully ornamented with jet flowers. Head-dress, a black turban, with a red and white tulle veil, and the insignia of the garter, the badge, and the star of diamonds. Her Majesty is expected to honour the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland with her company at St. James's, previous to their departure for Alnwick. Her grace, who was specially invited to Buckingham Palace, was received by the Queen with the most marked attention. The noble duke is convalescent, and was to attend the House of Lords on Monday.

The Duchess of Kent and the Prince and Princess of Leiningen went to Busby on Tuesday to visit Queen Adelaide. Prince George of Cambridge left Cambridge-house at half-past one o'clock on Monday for the Continent, for London, where his Royal Highness embarked for the continent. HIGH CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, JULY 17.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Marquis Conyngham, K.P., Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's Household, the Right Hon. Conroy. The request was answered by the intimation that the Ministers must judge of Sir John's claims and merits.—Cholentan paper.

LADY CAROLINE BARRINGTON, a daughter of Earl Grey, is appointed one of the Ladies of the Bedchamber to the Queen. A letter has been received in Privy-gardens from Drayton Park, which states that Sir R. Peel, although not quite recovered from his late indisposition, is much better; and it is confidently expected that in a few days the right hon. baronet will be restored to his usual good state of health.

CHOLERA AT NAPLES.—The intelligence received from Naples continues to be of a very afflictive character. The cholera was ravaging that city to an almost unprecedented extent.

ANECDOTE OF HER MAJESTY.—The following anecdote of her Majesty, illustrative of her sound judgment, and of her kind and affectionate feelings towards the Queen Dowager, may be relied on.—On Monday last, when Wood, of Oxford, was the executor of the late lamented monarch, William IV., waited on her Majesty, relative to the disposal of some of his late Majesty's property, when, on pressing the Queen for an answer on one of the points, her Majesty, with much firmness, said, "I would rather think about that matter first,—perhaps, I should like to know tomorrow my determination on the subject." Colonel Wood then had had another favour to beg of her Majesty, which was, that the Queen Dowager had a great partiality for a few trifling articles of furniture, which had been favourites with her late lamented consort, which she did not wish to disturb, or to remove from Windsor, which she would leave to her Majesty, with great emotion immediately replied, "Oh, my dear Wood, let the dear Queen have them by all means, and any thing else in the Castle which she may desire."—Observer.

PROCESSION OF THE QUEEN TO PARLIAMENT.

The morning of Monday was one of interest, as well as most agreeable, excitement in the metropolis and its neighbourhood for many miles around. Before the hour of ten o'clock, numerous groups were already assembled in the vicinity of the new (Buckingham) Palace, principally; but St. James's-park, throughout its whole extent, became gradually crowded with respectable persons. In the square in front of the Palace-yard and in Parliament-street preparations had been made, and plans raised, to accommodate the paying part of the public, which certainly appeared very numerous on this occasion. Not only Whitehall, the Horse Guards, and the Treasury, were filled with the most respectable company of both sexes, but also the colonnade in St. James's Park and the houses of Carlton-terrace, were crowded with the fashionable and the members of the English gentry. The grand flight of steps close to the York column contained what appeared from below to be a close column of people upon an inclined plain. The fineness of the day gave all its power to increase the brilliancy of this animated and animating scene. At ten minutes before two o'clock her Majesty left the palace. The state coach was drawn by eight cream-coloured horses, in this was her Majesty, who was attired in a very splendidly figured dress of white satin, the front of which was thickly studded with brilliants, forming a stomacher of uncommon beauty. Her Majesty also had a splendid diamond tiara on her head, and in her ears she wore large pearls of surprising brilliancy. On her Majesty's left arm appeared "the garter," and over her dress was an ample robe of crimson velvet. The Earl of Albemarle, Master of the Horse, and Lady Mulgrave, were with her Majesty. At the instant her Majesty appeared outside the gates of the palace, the most rapturous shouts of applause were heard on all sides, and the multitude, who had been assembled in great numbers of an affectionate people in the most gracious manner. Sir F. Roe and two principal officers of Bow-street were in close attendance near her Majesty's carriage, both on going out and returning. The state apartments were lined by the Yeomen of the Guard, and the Master of the Chamber, who at ten minutes past two her Majesty entered the house, attended by the great Officers of State. The sword of state was borne by Viscount Melbourne, and the cap of maintenance by the Earl of Shaftesbury. Her Majesty having seated herself on the throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was directed to attend to the attendance of the Commons to hear the royal assent given to a number of bills, and to the prorogation of Parliament, &c. The anxiety to see her Majesty, on the part of persons who had admission tickets from the Lord Chamberlain's Office for the royal gallery, was testified by their early occupation of all the available room in that passage. The gallery presented a very brilliant sight at the time; and the appearance of the royal family, and the presence of their head in state liveries, the Herald's at Arms ranged above these, waiting till called to marshal in the young Queen, and the Gentlemen Pensioners, in their warlike trim, cock-fer-plumage, and quaint partisans, carrying on the line of pageantry up to the unfolded doors of the gallery the four trumpets of the guards broke forth in the simple but striking royal salute, and the troops presented arms. Every eye was fixed upon the young Queen, brought thus, for the first time, before her subjects at large, in this important ceremonial of her functions. Her Majesty walked forward firmly and slowly, and although the crowd was so vast, and the throng so dense, she gently upon, and bowed to those who silently saluted her, and with a quiet intelligence in her large pale blue eyes, and an expression of firmness derived from her upper lip being compressed so almost to disappear behind the lower, moved gracefully along.

Her Majesty wore a splendid crown, or coronet of diamonds; on her ears she wore large pearls, and the gemstones of the same precious quality; a tissue of brilliants seemed reticulated round the upper part of her dress, next her bosom, and were carried down to the waist in a priceless stomacher. On the left arm we thought we perceived the garter, and on the right an armband of match, of bright enamel and jewellery. Her gown was of white silk, and the crown was of the same material, and gold border. Her Majesty, in addition, wore a crimson velvet robe, which was supported by three boy pages. Her costume was, indeed, at once most magnificent, most elegant, and most chaste. In the house the Queen took her seat on the throne, the Imperial Crown being borne at her side, on a cushion, by the Duke of Somerset. The speech was delivered in French, and was of a most interesting and distinguished nature. The parts of the house most remote from the throne. The want of light, however, that has been so frequently complained of, was the cause of evident inconvenience to the Queen.

On leaving the house the Queen was flushed, but the cause of the excitement was over. Her spirits were evidently improved; and there was an elasticity in her manner that was not to be expected. The first of the day, however, passed, there is no fear that the same nervous though amiable sensitiveness will again oppress her, and her subjects will be happy in thinking that the care of the general interest will be no longer a source of the same uneasiness to their youthful Sovereign.

GREAT BRITAIN AND HOLLAND.—The terms of a commercial treaty upon the principles of reciprocity between Great Britain and Holland are said to be finally arranged, and will be formally stated as soon as the ratifications have been exchanged.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.—By the proclamation dissolving the Parliament, Monday, the 11th of September, is the day on which the writs are to be returnable.

LISBON.—Letters have been received from Lisbon, stating that her Majesty's ship Talavera had sailed under sealed orders, for the purpose of being sent to the Cape Verde Islands, and the Royal Marines.

THE KING'S THEATRE.—Her Majesty, accompanied by the King's Highness the Duchess of Kent, honoured this theatre on Tuesday night, upon the first performance of Marlin's opera of Idemondo. Her Majesty's person was concealed by the drapery of the box, and the audience seemed well pleased to receive this assurance. The evening was extended, until at length the whole house joined in one general cheer and clapping of hands. Then, and not till then, did her Majesty deem it fitting to acknowledge a public salute, and, coming to the centre of the box, bowed frequently to the house. This, of course, drew forth an almost enthusiastic peal of cheering, accompanied by a general waving of handkerchiefs and hats. At the same time the band, which had been about to proceed with the opera, broke into the national anthem; after which, with one cheer more, her Majesty withdrew to her private box. On her Majesty's departure she left the theatre, the same demonstrations of zealous affection on the part of loving subjects were renewed.

BRAVEY OF THE LATE KING.—The following characteristic anecdote, which has never appeared before in print, is related by an officer who served under our late monarch, when Duke of Clarence.—"In the early part of the year 1814 the regiment to which I had the honour to belong, formed part of the British force, which was ordered to Sir J. Graham's army, and I was in the ranks, in the course of duty for outlying pickets before Antwerp, it occurred that I was the senior officer present when his royal highness the Duke of Clarence entered the trenches. The enemy's shot and shell were coming among us too thick for most amateurs; not so, however, for his royal highness. On approaching and saluting the prince by his highness, he observed, 'You are a brave fellow, and you have rather smart work here, sir.' At that moment a shot from the enemy's guns carried away the mainstay, close to which we were standing. I exclaimed that the enemy had just opened more batteries, and that his royal highness was exposed to danger. 'Every man here is exposed to danger,' was the rejoinder, 'and I am not more so than you are.' He then, I deemed myself more value than your brave comrade there. I only wish the enemy to leave the walls, that we might have an opportunity of sleeping in Antwerp.' His royal highness remained a considerable time examining our works and fortifications, and left us with a flattering compliment upon our bravery, and a promise that he would be pleased to have us follow from joining the regiment which he had just left."

GREENWICH ELECTION.

Notwithstanding Treasury mandates and Admiralty influence, the return of Mr. Atwood, the Conservative candidate to Parliament for the borough of Greenwich, is well placed or ten days been canvassed most strictly by both parties, and the result is that a tremendous majority of votes have been promised for the Conservative candidate, although Mr. Bernard and Capt. Napier are canvassing in coalition. The former gentleman, who has already represented the borough, possesses great influence there; Captain Napier has also won him the votes of almost all the old pensioners, who have obtained the franchise by residing out of the college, who, laying aside all political opinions, will vote for him because he belongs to their profession. In Woolwich and Deptford, where hitherto any ministerial candidate has carried all before him, and a Conservative has scarcely ventured to show his face the tables are now quite turned: in those districts whenever Mr. Atwood has presented himself to the electors, his reception has been most enthusiastic.

Every manoeuvre to injure the cause of Mr. Atwood has been unceremoniously used by his opponents, but has been signally defeated, not the least of which was an assertion that he was an enemy to the working classes. This immediately called forth a spontaneous circular from the workmen employed in the General Steam Navigation Company, of which Mr. Atwood is the chairman, and a very extensive proprietor, signed by 287 persons, setting forth that since they have been so employed, they have experienced from Mr. Atwood the greatest kindness, and that he had on all occasions exerted himself in their behalf for their interests.

It is very generally rumoured, by persons who are not likely to be misled, that Capt. Napier does not intend to go to a poll, and that on the day of nomination he will publicly announce the fact, if not before. The reason for this determination is stated to be, that he will not be at any expense himself, and that his committee have declined to advance 800*l.*, of which sum about 700*l.* have been already expended. If, however, he should not adhere to this determination, the struggle will be between him and his colleague, as Mr. Atwood is certain of taking the lead. Of the two, however, the electors will, no doubt, select their old representative in preference to a stranger, advocating the same principles, and the "twice rejected of Portsmouth;" and as he has the arrogance to style himself the "Liberator of Portugal," will be able, when he applies (should he ever do so) to another constituency, to add to his former titles, "the rejected of Greenwich."

In consequence of the complaints made respecting the direct influence used by government over persons employed in the dock-yards, a circular was issued on Tuesday (after all the mischief was accomplished from the Admiralty, signed by Mr. C. Wood, forbidding the officers in command, or the officers under them, in any manner interfering with the elective franchise of the men, under pain of their severe displeasure.

On Wednesday, those staunch friends of "purity of election," and decided enemies of bribery and corruption, in every shape, gave a free feed to all the "great unwashed" who felt that it was worth attending to, and to do them justice, they made the most of the opportunity, such as not likely to present itself again. At 5 o'clock one of the most motley groups that ever assembled within the walls of the "Mitre," the head-quarters of the Radicals, sat down to a dinner, which was attended by all those persons in the town and neighbourhood who could, for the occasion, by "hook or by crook," get a decent coat to put on; dirty shirts were very conspicuous, and it is believed many attended who had not shirts at all. The table was headed by one Harwood, a barrister, as it was stated, on either side of whom were the two "Lions," that very notable Radical, Mr. Borrett, officiated as vice. Various toasts were drunk in the course of the evening; and between 9 and 10 o'clock the town was in a perfect uproar, which continued till a very late hour, caused by numerous individuals who were rolling about the street, in a state of "glorious unconsciousness," brought on by indulging too freely with old Bacchus.

PIN-MAKING.—In the course of examination, respecting the patent right to a pin-making machine, some curious facts came out; for it appears that the average weight of pins each day manufactured is two tons, and one house has a constant output, year for year, for the amount of six hundred and fifty millions.

ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—A fine female rhinoceros and a large male tiger, were on Tuesday morning taken to the Zoological Garden, in the Regent's-park, from a vessel in the London Dock, which has also brought two lions for the same gardens.

THE JOHN BARRY.—The "John Barry," which sailed from Dundee on the 15th of March, with emigrants to New South Wales, has been heard of from St. Jago, in the Cape Verde Islands, on the 25th of April. FRUIT. July 11.—The day before yesterday, about noon, the Prince of Orange arrived here very unexpectedly from the Hague, to meet the Grand Duke Michael, who arrived soon afterwards, with a numerous suite, among whom was the Russian Ambassador, our Court. The meeting of the two princes was most cordial, and our Court having dismissed the party, the Prince of Orange going to Soestdyk, and the Grand Duke to Deventer.

NAVAL EDUCATION IN BELGIUM.—If we are rightly informed, it is decided that in the budget of the marine for 1838, a vote of credit will be proposed for constructing a dock yard and arsenal, which are to be erected near our port, and employed in guarding the coasts, and to build ships of a larger size to protect our commerce in those seas where it may be necessary.—Brussels paper.
