We approached quietly from about 200 metres downwind to watch the awesome spectacle of black rhinos fighting in the water. An old black rhino was fighting a younger bull for dominance.

The fight was fierce with old and new wounds clearly visible.

After about an hour the young one accepted defeat and showed submission by lowering his head into the water with an open mouth. The older victor walked away, proudly stopping for a mud bath, rolling back and forth.

When he was done he came back to deliver a stern warning before calmly leaving the young upstart glued to his place in the water.
