EXTRAORDINARY GROWTH IN AN ANIMAL.—It is a fact well attested by the first connoisseurs in this great metropolis, and well worthy the attention of the Public, about nineteen months since, Captain Isack, of the Metcalfe East Indiaman, brought to England a fine young Rhinoceros, which was purchased by Mr. POLITO, at the Royal Menagerie, Exeter 'Change; a suitable place was accordingly made for him, supposed large enough to contain him for years, but he grew so very fast, that it was found necessary, last summer, to have him removed out of it for some time, while its place could be made larger and more secure; it is, however, not many months since he was with great difficulty and skill replaced in his abode, and the Proprietor finds himself now equally if not more awkwardly situated for the want of room for him, as he has already attained a superior size than any animal of that kind ever seen in this kingdom.
