The American public are this season favored with access to the largest Zoological Museum ever opened in the United States, and the opportunity is a fit one for the intelligent of both sexes to investigate a pleasing science, with the aid of living demonstration.

The collection of Messrs. Raymond and Waring has become a leading feature of public amusement and instruction, their agents have traversed every country within the four quarters of the Globe to render their establishments in every respect perfect and pre-eminent.

ARRIVAL OF THE ASIATIC RHINOCEROS,

Very recently imported and added to this collection

The magnitude of this enterprise can scarcely be appreciated by the public. The enormous labor, cost and anxiety consequent to its capture and transportation are incalculable. This is the second Rhinoceros ever brought alive to America, and the third or fourth ever shipped from Asia. This stupendous and formidable creature arrived from the East Indies, consigned to Messrs. Raymond and Waring, since their Menagerie commenced the summer tour, and of course has been very recently added to their collection.—It is in fine order, of the largest size, and notwithstanding its recent capture, is perfectly docile. Although the Rhinoceros is untamable, he is neither ferocious nor carnivorous. He is found in the marshy places of Asia and Africa, Bengal, Siam, Laos, the Mogal dominions, Sumatra, Java, Abyssinia, and the Cape of Good Hope. His skin even resists the ball of a musket—those of lead become quite flat upon the hide—and the iron ingots cannot penetrate through it. The only places penetrable in his huge cuirass-encased body, are the belly, the eyes, and about the ears. Of all quadrupeds, he is only inferior to the Elephant in size and strength. He carries upon his nose a very formidable weapon which is peculiar to himself, a very hard horn, which is solid throughout, and which is between three and four feet in length. It is with this weapon that the Rhinoceros is said to attack, and sometimes mortally wound the largest elephants, whose long legs give the Rhinoceros, who has them much shorter, an opportunity of striking his antagonist with it under the body, but if he misses the first blow, the Elephant throws him on the ground and instantly kills him.

What renders the exhibition of this curious animal of peculiar interest is the fact of its never living over a single season out of its native climate; and the almost insurmountable difficulties attending its capture. Encased in his coat of natural armor, impervious to rifle ball or spear, the Rhinoceros is slung by the boldest hunter, and the most ferocious of beasts are destroyed by him. His mortal foe is the Elephant, and when a combat between them ensues, the issue is doubtful. His undoubted courage and invincible strength have rendered him the acknowledged autocrat and master of the jungles and marshes of Asia.

It may be many years before, if ever, a living specimen of this rare and singular brute will again be offered for exhibition in this country.

Messrs. Raymond & Waring would respectfully announce to the public, that on that occasion they will have an opportunity of witnessing the novel and daring performances of Miss ADELIA, who for her courage and intrepidity, has gained the name of the LION QUEEN. She will enter the den of the fiercest animals, with the renowned Mr. PIERCE, the Great Lion Tamer, under whose instruction, she has been taught the practice of this almost superhuman exhibition of self-possession, fearless address, and indomitable courage.

In the course of the exhibition Mr. PIERCE will drive a full grown AFRICAN LION harnessed to a Triumphant Car.

A full list of all the various animals embraced in this collection will be found in the bills at the principal places of public resort.

The Caravan will exhibit in Vergennes on the 14th, at Hinesburgh on the 15th, at Richmond on the 17th, at Waterburg on the 18th, and at Montpelier on the 19th August.
