Referring to the capture of a baby two-horned rhinoceros which is expected shortly at the Calcutta Zoo, a correspondent writes to a contemporary :—
“ A party of Karens surprised it with its mother on the hills in the Bassein district of British Burma, and though the parent made good its escape, the quaint little infant was secured and soon reconciled itself to its new guardians. Thereafter it became the guest of Mr. St. Barbe, the Deputy Commissioner, and held crowded leves in his house for several days. At Rangoon it met with a similar enthusiastic reception, but is beginning, we regret to learn, to develop a temper and contumacy most unbecoming to rhinocerosic infancy. The animal is undoubtedly more unique and valuable than Mr. Barnum's white elephant, and if the Calcutta public feel inclined to indulge in any Jumboesque enthusiasm, they will before long have a good opportunity.”

The London correspondent of a Calcutta contemporary gives the following descriptive account of the speech delivered by Mr. John Bright at the anniversary dinner of the Northbrook Club at
